

AKRIVI KROUSKA

Akrivi Krouska

Dr. Akrivi Krouska is a Postdoctoral Researcher in the Department of Informatics and Computer Engineering, University of West Attica (Greece). She has received a Ph.D. degree in Informatics from the Department of Informatics of the University of Piraeus (Greece), a M.Sc. degree in “Information Systems” from the Department of Informatics of the University of Athens (Greece) and a B.Sc. degree in Informatics from the Department of Informatics of the University of Piraeus (Greece). During her studies and research, she has received several scholarships for her academic performance and “Best Paper” awards in international conferences on computer science topics, respectively.

She has published extensively in international journals, books and conference proceedings and has served as Reviewer in the research community. Moreover, she has a contract with Springer for publishing a monograph in the field of intelligent technologies in digital education. Her current research interests are in the areas of adaptive learning, human-computer interaction, learning analytics, user modelling and artificial intelligence in education.